Applicants' election of Group I is acknowledged (claims 1-50, 82, 83, 94, 95, 107, 108). Applicants' response to the species election requirement is also acknowledged.

Applicants have traversed the restriction requirement. One argument advanced by applicants is that if an examiner in Australia abstains from imposing a restriction requirement in a PCT application, an examiner in the U.S. is obligated to abstain from imposing the same in the corresponding national phase application. However, this is entirely untrue, even when the two examiners are employees of the same patent office. Applicants have also argued that in "371" cases, applicants enjoy blanket "immunity" from restrictions, provided that they have made some sort of assertion in the specification as to how one could use the various inventions (at issue) together. However, this is not true. If one of the inventions fails to "define a contribution" over the prior art, then a restriction can be justified. A genus can meet this test even if 99.99% of the embodiments are completely novel. All that is required is for the examiner to find just one embodiment within the claimed genus in order for the invention to short of "defining a contribution". The examiner asserts that there exists at least one embodiment within the scope of claim that can be rejected as obvious over the prior art. No evidence to support this proposition is provided at the present time. In the event that such evidence is not forthcoming, the examiner will be forced to concede applicants' position. The conclusion of this particular dialog will have to await the additional passage of time.

Art Unit: 1654

Further definition of the elected compound is now sought. What is required (under 35 U.S.C. §121) is an election of a fully defined lipopeptide that falls within the scope of claim 1 and which is consistent with the previous election. It may be that the elected compound will conform to the following formula wherein “Th” is the peptide of SEQ ID NO:1, “B” is the peptide of SEQ ID NO: 2, R_2 and R_3 are both palmitic acid, and “Y” is the dipeptide Ser-Ser. If not, applicants can elect some other structure.

Applicant is advised that a response to this requirement must include an identification of the species that is elected consonant with this requirement, and a listing of all claims readable thereon, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a generic claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered nonresponsive unless accompanied by an election.

Art Unit: 1654

Upon allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP 809.02(a).

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the species are not patentable distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. §103 of the other invention.
